WILLIAM L. RISK IS NOMINATED

Newcastle Man is Unanimously Selected to Lead Sixth District
Republicans.

TAFT'S WORK IS ENDORSED

Will Hough and George Barnard, Permanent and Temporary Chairmen,
Score Bull Moosers.

William L. Risk of Newcastle, Henry county chairman and former county auditor, was unanimously nominated for congress at the Sixth district Republican convention in Connersville this afternoon. His name was the only one placed before the convention. He made a short speech of acceptance.

Every county seconded the nomination of Risk after Fayette had yielded to Henry to place his name in nomination. Walter Bossert of Liberty, who was a candidate, moved the nomination of Risk be by acclamation and thanked the convention for the consideration given him. Charles Stivers, another candidate from Liberty, made the same motion and thanked the convention.

"He's a good risk," shouted a delegate as W. L. Risk went to the stage after the nomination.

The resolutions were brief and reaffirmed and endorsed the Republican national and State platform. They declared the party in sympathy with the present administration, pledged Republicans to the support of Taft and all Republican candidates.

The committee on rules and order of business recommended Will Hough of Greenfield for permanent chairman and George A. Elliott of the Newcastle Courier for permanent secretary and the convention abided by the report.

Chairman Hough made a short speech in which he declared the time had come for plain speaking and for men with the courage to say Theodore Roosevelt was a traitor to his party and that he never was a Republican.

"Albert J. Beveridge is a pimple on the political map," he asserted, "and a traitor to the party which gave him all the political honor he ever had. During the twelve years that he was in office he never raised his voice for any of the reforms he now stands for."

He said the purpose of the Bull Moose party was to put Theodore Roosevelt and Albert J. Beveridge in office, and let us make a solemn vow, he continued, that they shall not get in. He reviewed the national convention briefly and his assertion that Taft was nominated fairly and honestly brought wild enthusiasm and applause. He was frequently applauded during his speech.

Verne Norris was chairman of the Rush county delegation and Fred A. Capp was vice-chairman. The other organization was as follows: Ab Denning, rules and order of business; W. O. Feudner, resolutions; W. S. Coleman, credentials.

Vincent Gray of Union township, who was elected as a Roosevelt delegate to the early congressional convention, resigned and V. Norris served in his place.

About forty Republicans from Rushville attended. The downstairs of the Auditorium where the convention was held was almost filled. Some delay was experienced in starting the convention as Will Hough was late in arriving. James E. Watson was scheduled to make an address late this afternoon.

The convention was called to order shortly after eleven o'clock by Mayor George Barnard of Newcastle, temporary chairman. He launched forth DEMANDS $10,000 DAMAGES OF I. & C.

Mrs. Cora B. Hardwick Files Suit Against Traction Company For Death of Husband.

The I. & C. Traction Co. was made the defendant in a $10,000 damage suit this afternoon. The plaintiff is Mrs. Cora B. Hardwick, widow of the late John Hardwick, who was killed last November at stop 33 by a work train which he mistook for a regular car and attempted to flag.

The complaint alleges that the traction company was running the work train in a negligent manner, stating that the train was made up of four gravel cars pushed by the work car and that only a lantern was displayed on the front car. The plaintiff states that John Hardwick attempted to flag the train which was running at the excessive speed of thirty-five miles an hour and was instantly killed.

Hardwick in company with his twelve-year-old daughter, Myrtle, had gone to the station intending to come to this city. He stood in the center of the track and attempted to flag the train with a lantern. The front car hit him, hurling him twenty-five feet and killing him instantly. Mrs. Hardwick claims that he was her only support and demands ten thousand dollars damages. Sexton and McColgin represent Mrs. Hardwick.

SCHOOL HOUSE FINISHED

Milroy Has New Modern and Sanitary Building to Use.

A new modern and sanitary school house which complies with the requirements of the sanitary school house law has just been completed and will be occupied for the first time at the opening of school next month. All the up-to-date appliances for heating and ventilating the building have been installed. Three sanitary drinking fountains are a part of the fixtures, and the water will be supplied from a large tank. The school house grounds have been beautified by planting trees and placing flower beds around promiscuously.

IT'S INMAN'S HABIT.

Newcastle Courier: In the case of B. R. Inman lining up with the Bull Moose party, the expected has happened. With Mr. Inman's habit of changing his political coat every now and then the wonder among those acquainted with his record is that he was slow getting into action. At Middletown he has never been considered a real Republican. The Indianapolis Star shows ignorance of the subject in playing up the announcement on the first page with a double-column portrait of Mr. Inman.

COUNCIL HELD BUSY SESSION

City "Dads" Granted Several Petitions and Ordered Many Improvements Last Night.

TO FIX RAILWAY CROSSING

Mayor Black Made Second Request For Written Report From Special Water Committee.

The adjourned session of the city council last night was a busy one and it was after eleven o'clock when the meeting finally broke up. Many things of importance were transacted. The council adopted the preliminary assessment role on the improvement of Arthur street. The sidewalks and curb have been in a long time, but the city engineer's report was made only at the last regular meeting. Last night was the time set for the hearing of remonstrators on the proposed improvement of Fourth street. No remonstrators appeared and the clerk was ordered to advertise for bids. The improvement is for cement sidewalks, curb and gutter in Fourth street between Morgan and Harrison street. Bids will be received August 20.

The question of fixing the crossing at Main street and the C. H. & D. railway was finally disposed of and the improvement ordered. It is planned to raise the brick street on the north side of the track to the level of the rails. Since the south side of the crossing is level by raising the brick on the north the crossing will be put in good shape. The city engineer gave an estimate of the cost, which he placed at $180. The work will start at once and will be under the supervision of the street commissioner and the engineer.

Several resident property owners of East Ninth street appeared before the council in behalf of a petition asking for a drain from George street. The drain in East Ninth has been a source of considerable trouble and has never been satisfactorily worked out. The question was left with the street and alley committee.

Since the sidewalks and curb have been placed in Hannah street it has been found that the street was not properly graded and left a part of the curb exposed. In order to remedy the matter the street will be graded and gravel placed in the low places.

A petition for sidewalks in East Eighth street was granted. A request for a bridge over Hodge's branch in an alley back of Eighth street, between Sexton and Arthur streets was also granted. The petition for street lights in North Main street north of Eleventh street was read and granted.

An ordinance appropriating $200 for the water and light fund was passed. The $200 will be used to pay water rebate.

Since the council passed the motion to refund money paid for sprinkling during last year many have taken advantage and the money for this purpose has been exhausted.

Dr. Parsons, chairman of the special water committee, reported that the well recently completed in the Jones pasture, east of the city, had been tested and gave 82 gallons per minute. Arrangements are being made to install a pump and connect it with the city plant by an eight inch main. Work has been started on another well in the Jones pasture. Mayor Black put in his second request for a written report on the cost of the pumps from the committee. His first request was ignored although a bill for pumps amounting to $580 was paid. At present there is a bill for pumps amounting to $1100 which has not been paid.

BOLT CAUSES LOSS OF $4,000

Lightning Fires Barn on Ed Dolan Farm, North of Glenwood Early This Morning.

CORN, OATS, AND HAY LOST

Terrific Storm Which Swept Over the County This Morning Leaves Havoc in Its Wake.

The terrific wind and electrical storm which swept over Rush county in the early hours this morning left havoc in its wake. Several fine specimens of trees were hit by lightning, many corn fields were laid low by the wind and a large barn on Ed Dolan's farm, three miles north of Glenwood, was hit by lightning and burned to the ground at a loss of four thousand dollars.

The lightning bolt struck the barn at six-forty o'clock, and by eight o'clock the modern structure was in ruins. The bolt struck in the top of the barn and the whole building was a mass of flames before help could be summoned.

Farmers from all of that vicinity gathered hurriedly, but their work was of no avail. The fire seemed to spring from every corner of the barn and with no fire fighting facilities the farmers were practically helpless.

They did a good work, however, in saving a granary near the barn. The granary contained fourteen hundred bushels of wheat which had just been stored there after this year's harvest. The wheat was worth approximately twelve hundred dollars. The granary stood near the barn and it was threatened with destruction several times during the burning of the barn.

The fire burned steadily during a heavy downpour of rain, but it was not enough to quench the blaze which got a good start inside the barn before it was subjected to the rain. The fact that the rain fell continuously during the fire probably accounts for the failure of the granary to catch fire.

Two hundred and fifty bushels of oats from this year's harvest, two hundred bushels of corn and thirty tons of this year's hay was destroyed by the blaze. Also there were several vehicles and other farm equipment which went up in smoke. It was impossible to save anything of any great value because the fire got such a good start.

Fortunately enough for Mr. Dolan the barn was hit by lightning before the stock had been brought in from the fields. His loss would have been much greater had the bolt struck an hour later, because by that time all of the live stock on the farm would have been in the barn for the morning feeding.

The residence on the farm was never endangered by the blaze. It stands a considerable distance from where the barn was located, and on account of the steady rain, the sparks were not carried far by the wind.

The loss of four thousand dollars is not all covered by insurance.

ONE SIDED FIGHT LEADS TO ARRESTS

Arthur Trader While Under Influence of Liquor Was Knocked Down by Jesse Sorrell.

As the result of a fight in front of the McCormie saloon in West Second street last evening, Arthur Trader and Jesse Sorrell were fined one dollar and costs each this morning in police court. Trader drew his fine for intoxication and Sorrell for assault and battery. Both fines were stayed.

According to Sorrell's story of the affair, Trader provoked him. Sorrell hit him behind the ear, but Trader admitted he did not know who it was that assaulted him. Between the blow and the bad booze Trader was put out of commission and was hauled to jail. At first it was not known just how bad he was hurt, but an examination showed he was not seriously injured. Sorrell was not arrested until this morning after Trader had pleaded guilty.

Prosecutor Morgan told Sorrell that hitting a drunken man was in his opinion about the worst thing he could do especially so since he was not provoked any more than he was. Mr. Morgan gave Sorrell a severe lecture and the chances are he would not have gotten off so easily if Morgan had been the judge.

Former Resident of This County Passed Away in Greenfield From Heart Attack.

WAS BORN AND REARED HERE

The funeral services of Samuel B. Souder, a former Rush county man, who died Saturday evening at his home in Greenfield from an attack of the heart, were held this morning in the Bradley M. E. church there.

Mr. Souder was born in this county January 5, 1852 and until eight years ago was a resident of Carthage. He had a large number of relatives in this county and was quite well known.

Without a moment's warning Mr. Souder was stricken while returning thanks at the table, and died before physicians arrived. While he was returning thanks his wife noticed that his voice trembled and then it failed him altogether, and he started to fall. He is survived by his widow and three brothers.

ADVISES AGAINST COUNTY TICKET

Bull Moose Leaders and Newspapers Advocate Support of Republican Ticket Already Selected.

DON'T TAKE KINDLY TO LEE

Connersville News Says Third County Ticket Would be Nothing Short of Dishonorable.

Edwin M. Lee, State chairman of the Bull Moose party, has sounded the dictum, that the new party shall put county tickets in the field in every county. But it appears that the bolters from the Republican party in many instances are not disposed to look with favor on this new feature of the Bull Moose party.

There is a general tendency to believe that the bolters should remain by the county ticket in the counties where they helped nominate it. Several Bull Moose leaders and one or two newspapers who have flopped over to the cause of Roosevelt believe that the county Republican ticket should be supported.

Local leaders of the Bull Moose party have announced that they have reached no decision as to the course to pursue in this regard. "It has been generally understood among the Bull Moosers here that they would support the county ticket which they helped make."

The Connersville News, which, after considerable hesitancy, has joined the new party, announces editorially that placing a third county ticket in the field and failure to support the regular republican ticket would be nothing short of dishonorable.

The News says: From the standpoint of a political leader, Chairman Lee may be right in urging that tickets be placed in all minor political divisions even down to townships. But the situation is peculiar in that the Progressive party has come into being since many county and other tickets were named by the help of men now largely composing the Progressive party. These men virtually said to the candidates then named, "we will support you." To compel men to break that pledge now since they themselves have had new light on national politics would be like the breaking of any other pledge—dishonorable. The Progressive movement is preeminently for rule by the people and we believe that Mr. Lee and his associates would make a political and strategical mistake in trying to enforce any rule to which the large majority of his party is opposed. The public recognizes that the party is young, and could hardly be expected to cover every minor field within a few weeks or months after its organization. We believe that the movement is fast progressing but mistakes might very easily be made in the present mental condition of the people by enforcing rules made by a few leaders, too far.

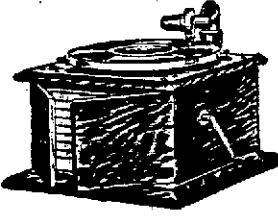

Mr. Lee's chief, Mr. Roosevelt, has recognized the wisdom, on more than one occasion in the past seven weeks of letting the people of certain local communities control the situation. Organization for the purpose for which the party was called into being will in no wise suffer by giving the voters a little "rope" in the process of putting the Progressive cause on solid ground to the end that The People Shall Rule.

Will J. Robbins, Wayne county Republican chairman, who resigned Saturday to affiliate with the Bull Moosers, says in regard to the county ticket situation in a statement he prepared:

On January 29th of this year I was chosen by a united Republican

CAUGHT AT CROSSING
Farmer's Wife Killed by Traction Car Run by Her Brother.
Greenwood, Ind., Aug. 13.—Mrs. Charles Henry, aged thirty, wife of a farmer, was killed at Stop 18, one mile south of Greenwood, when the automobile in which she and her husband were coming to Greenwood was struck by the Dixie flyer on the Indianapolis, Columbus & Southern traction line. They had left home only a few minutes before. She was riding in the rear seat of the machine.
Mr. Henry was driving the car and a cornfield prevented his seeing the approaching car until too late. He "killed" his engine, hoping to stop the automobile before it reached the track, and jumped from it, escaping injury. The car shot onto the tracks and stopped, the traction car at that instant striking it and hurling Mrs. Henry to her death. The automobile was demolished.
The conductor of the traction car was Bert Van Arsdell, and when the car stopped he found that his own sister had been killed. The motorman of the car was Dalton McCool. The conductor and motorman live in Greenwood.

RECORDS LACKING SAYS MR. M'KINLEY
No Figures On Republican Congressional Campaigns.

Washington, Aug. 13.—The senate committee which is investigating campaign contributions of the financing of the Republican campaigns of 1908 and 1910, heard Representative W. B. McKinley of Illinois, who was manager of the Taft pre-convention campaign. Mr. McKinley said he knew of no complete record of the contributions to the 1908 campaign; that the late Representative Loudenslager, of New Jersey, had handled this end of the work.
"Have you any idea how much money was raised?" asked Senator Clapp.
"I should think about $60,000" Mr. McKinley replied. "As to individual contributions, I only remember my own, which was five, six or seven thousand dollars."
"We had a rule," the congressman continued, "that no contributions should be accepted from corporations. None was received from any of the trusts—the harvester, steel, tobacco, Standard Oil, or others."
Representative McKinley said he thought the total contributions in the 1910 campaign amounted to $70,000.

THREE MEN AT HEAD OF GAME
How Police Blackmail Was Made Possible.

BURNS THEORY WORKING OUT
Detective Reveals to New York's District Attorney Conclusions Thus Far Reached on the Trail of the Graft Game as It Is Operated by Police at Expense of Keepers of Gaming and Disorderly Houses in Gotham.

New York, Aug. 13.—Three men who have made it possible for policemen to blackmail gamblers and disorderly houses have been named by W. J. Burns to the district attorney.
One of these, says Burns, is a lawyer-politician who claimed to represent the city administration. Another is a hotel man with influence in the Democratic party. This man represented the organization. The third, less prominent, made it appear that he spoke for the police.
It has been their custom, says Burns, to meet frequently in an up-town hotel not far from Forty-second street and Broadway. The hotel in which they met was not the Metropole, nor was it a resort of common gamblers or law breakers.

In addition to information which points to these three as the board of directors of graft, Mr. Burns has, he informed the district attorney, grounds for stating that two police inspectors, at least, were profiting richly through the looting of gamblers and other persons outside the law.
Mr. Whitman had an earnest conference with Mr. Burns. The district attorney was anxious to know if Burns had obtained any graft evidence by running real or pretended gambling houses, or real or pretended disorderly houses.

"I was very much surprised," said the district attorney, "to read what purported to be descriptions of a method used by you in obtaining evidence against corrupt policemen. If you had obtained such evidence it was my right to have it. If you have not such evidence, your name should not have been connected with such stories."
"It is absolutely untrue that I have been obtaining evidence by any such means," Burns replied. "I would have informed you, of course, if I had taken such measures. I did not lend my name to these stories. It is not my habit to trumpet my work while the work is under way."

Having had it out with the detective, the district attorney talked at length with him as to what had been accomplished since Burns took charge personally of the graft investigation. Burns has been at work two weeks. He not only is in active charge, but he has assigned his best men. They have followed up clues and suggestions that have not been made public. Some of Burns' information had not reached the district attorney even.
The story is that the ring has been operating extensively since about the time that William J. Flynn, the secret service man, left the police department. Whether or not Mr. Flynn has talked to Burns is not known. But Flynn has talked to the district attorney. At any rate, the collections from gambling houses, disorderly houses and other sources of tainted money have been systematically fixed and active for a year or more.

As the investigation proceeds the district attorney becomes convinced that the estimate furnished by Jack Rose, that at least $2,400,000 was collected in a part of Manhattan alone was only scratching the truth. It is impossible for Burns or for Mr. Whitman to make any estimate as to the yearly total of graft collections. That the blackmail ran into many millions, neither doubts for a moment.

District Attorney Whitman expects that Sam Scheppe, the alleged "fixer" in the Rosenthal case, who is under arrest at Hot Springs, Ark., will reach here on Friday. Mr. Whitman sent a process server to Hot Springs to fetch Scheppe back.

Congress's Naval Program.
Washington, Aug. 13.—A caucus of the house Democrats will be held tomorrow afternoon on the subject of the navy. Leaders say that a resolution will be passed placing the party on record favorable to an authorization in this year's naval bill of one battleship. Pro-navy men are still fighting for two battleships, but the indications are they will have to be content with one dreadnought.

New Postmaster at San Juan.
Washington, Aug. 13.—President Taft has summarily removed from office as postmaster at San Juan, Porto Rico, Walter K. Landis of Indiana, brother of Frederick Landis, Progressive candidate for lieutenant governor. The president has appointed to succeed Mr. Landis, Robert H. Todd, the Porto Rican member of the Republican national committee.

McGill Wins His Seat.
Washington, Aug. 13.—The house adopted the resolution reported by the elections committee declaring that Thomas Catlin of the Eleventh Missouri district was not entitled to his seat. A motion that Patrick F. Gill, the incumbent, was entitled to the seat then was passed.

Methods of Germans a Lesson to Americans

How the German farmers have welded their fifteen thousands and odd rural co-operative banks into a national organization that places behind the German agriculturist of today a financial power of stupendous size is shown by the investigation which is being conducted by Ambassador Leishman, at Berlin, in connection with President Taft's effort to establish co-operative credit in the United States for the benefit of the American farmer.

The average rural co-operative bank in Germany has a membership of less than a hundred people. It is conducted almost as a family affair and every member is personally acquainted with all the other members. Naturally, any organization of such limited scope would prove individually an insignificant factor in the financial world. It quickly dawned upon the German farmers, after the co-operative bank idea had taken substantial root in that country, that if their organizations were to secure a commanding position in the banking world they must concentrate their strength through unions. Consequently, the leaders of the movement undertook to combine the various rural banks in each province.

A central co-operative bank was established in each province, modeled simply as an enlarged edition of the local banks. The members belonging to the central banks were the local banks. They subscribed to stock in the central banks to form the capital. Their surplus funds were deposited with the central banks. Some money is secured also from loans from outside banks and some from loans advanced by the two general central banks which are a part of the co-operative bank organization and are to the provincial central banks what those banks are to the local banks or the local banks are to their members, the farmers.

The chief function of these central banks is to equalize the credit needs of the local banks. The great prosperity attending the local banks gives them, as a whole, money enough to finance the farmers with all the loans which they require. However, this prosperity is not equally divided. One bank finds itself with a large surplus at one time and another bank is in need of a loan to meet the calls made upon it by its members. The surplus of the one bank is deposited with the central bank of that province and is, in turn, loaned by the central bank to the other local bank requiring additional funds. Surplus funds not required by the local banks for loans are invested either with the general central banks or in securities. The central banks lend money to the local banks in two ways: upon current account and for fixed periods. Loans on current account, however, form the great majority of the business.

A step higher than these provincial banks are the general central banks. These banks extend their operations over the entire Empire. There are two of these banks—the Central Agricultural Loan Bank of Germany at Berlin and the National Bank Co-operative Societies at Darmstadt. These banks grant loans to the central co-operative banks and receive their deposits, acting as "equalizers," just as the provincial banks do to the local banks.

In 1909 these provincial and general central banks did a total business of $1,557,293,580. This gives an idea of the size of the co-operative credit business of Germany and of its importance to the German farmer.

Financial co-operation was not the only need felt among the many co-operative societies. It was a great movement, a new theory which, though immensely successful in its original form, required development and direction as it extended over the Empire and was fitted to the differing conditions of various communities. Also the co-operative idea in Germany was not confined entirely to financial co-operation. There were distributive co-operative societies, dairying co-operative societies, and other kinds. The working classes of Germany found an idea which would aid them in buying, in selling, and in banking. The members in this nation-wide movement felt the need of co-operation among themselves. As a result, provincial organizations were formed to propagate the co-operative idea, to educate the people in the movement, and to act as a general defense association for the entire membership of the co-operative movement.

Indiana Congressmen Out Spellbinding Have to go Home to File Campaign Statement.

A NEW WRINKLE IN THE LAW

Campaign spellbinders who happen to be members of the congress or are aspirants for such places are beginning to realize a burden that will be imposed on them by an entirely new wrinkle in the law regulating campaign expenditures.

The provision that heretofore has been overlooked requires that the four itemized statements of campaign expenses of men eager to be servants of the people in the halls of congress must be sworn to in the home state and district of the candidate.

Under the law, the man from Indiana, Missouri or Oregon who happens to be spellbinding in a distant part of the country must go home and attest his itemized statements of campaign expenses, which must be filed with the clerk of the house of representatives not less than ten or more than fifteen days before the election.

Charles Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N. BORDER PATROL HAD BRISK LITTLE BRUSH

Mexican Smugglers Chased Across the Line.

Washington, Aug. 13.—According to a telegram received at the war department from Colonel E. Z. Steever, in command of the patrol forces at El Paso, Tex., the most serious clash that has yet taken place between American soldiers on the Mexican border patrol and rebels or gun runners has occurred. Colonel Steever was notified by citizens in the Great Bend country of the Rio Grande, near Fort Bliss, that several suspicious Mexicans were in that vicinity, apparently prepared to smuggle arms and ammunition into Mexico. The movement was anticipated in a short, sharp engagement, in which one American soldier was slightly wounded and one Mexican was badly hurt and taken captive. The remainder of the band, composed of about fifty men, managed to get across the river, but were compelled to leave behind all their pack mules, fifteen in number, and their load of 50,000 rounds of ammunition and several rifles. The war contraband was taken to El Paso, where it was turned over to the federal legal authorities.

RUTHLESS SLAUGHTER

Mexican Rebels Did Not Spare Passengers on Troop Train.

Mexico City, Aug. 13.—Thirty-six soldiers and more than twenty passengers were slaughtered by Zapatistas in a canyon north of Ticomán, ten miles southeast of this city, when a passenger train southbound from this city was attacked from ambush. Only meager details have reached this city. So far as known only a part of the train crew escaped.

Then Told His Story.

Philadelphia, Aug. 13.—A world wide chase, beginning in Roumania, extending through nearly every country in Europe, across the Atlantic and to Philadelphia, ended here when Joseph Bengani, a wealthy Roumanian farmer, at last caught up with his wife, two children and, as he alleges, a defaulting tax collector, Joseph Avermaheou, with whom his wife ran away. After causing the arrest of the tax collector and the woman, the farmer got his children and told the story.

TERSE TELEGRAMS

Seven murderers were executed at Sing Sing Monday.

Present indications are that the Underwood income tax bill will fail of passage at this session of congress.

Harriet Reville, fourteen years old, of Harrison, N. J., had both her legs cut off while crawling under one of the cars of a freight train.

Since the organization of the government there have been but seven continuous sessions of congress of greater length than the present one.

The senate has adopted a conference report giving Mrs. Annie R. Schley, widow of the late Admiral W. S. Schley, a pension of $100 a month.

Stephen Kostoff, a Brockton (Mass.) barber, shot and killed his seventeen-year-old wife, his two-year-old baby and himself. Jealousy prompted the crime.

Aviator De Havilland, carrying a passenger in his aeroplane on Salisbury Plains, remained in the air for three hours, making a new British aerial record.

Julius Rosenwald, a Chicago philanthropist, celebrated his fiftieth birthday anniversary by giving away $837,500 to charitable and educational institutions.

According to information gleaned from baseball men conversant with the financial status of the various major league clubs, none of the club owners will lose money this year.

BUGS DAMAGE TWO BIG CROPS

Potatoes and Tomatoes Attacked by Insects That May do Great Injury.

WEEDS CAUSE EXISTENCE

Cutting of Rank Growths Would Tend to do Away With Danger—our Pests.

Two insects are causing a tremendous lot of worry in the ranks of Indiana potato and tomato growers this year, judging from the inquiries which are daily pouring into the office of Prof. James Troop, entomologist at Purdue University, and unless something is done to check their onslaught, growers in this state will find themselves losers to the extent of hundreds and even thousands of dollars. The fact that these insects both bore into the stems of the plants has given them the popular name of "Tomato Stalk Borer." (Papaipema nitela) and "Potato Stalk Borer" (Trichobaris trinotata).

The former is a member of the nightflyer family to which the cutworm moths belong, and not only infests tomato plants, but corn and several other grain and forage crops. It is also fond of many of the common weeds of the state, such as the cocklebur, ragweed, and wherever these weeds are found in or near a tomato field, the tomato plants are very likely to suffer from the borers.

Prof. Troop describes the adult moth as a grayish with the outer edge of the front wing of a lighter shade and bordered within by a lighter colored cross line. The moth lays clusters of fifty eggs or more on weeds near the ground, where they pass the winter. These hatch early in May and the young larvae begin feeding in the tissue of the leaves. They soon work their way down into the stems, which they bore out, causing the stalks to wither and die. The larvae is very industrious and if often known to cause the death of several plants. When it is full grown in July, the larvae is about an inch in length and is recognized by five white stripes on the back and sides of the body. It remains in this state for three weeks, when the moths come forth and is soon ready to lay the eggs which are to carry the species over the winter. Fortunately, there is only one brood during the year.

"This borer is essentially a lesson to Indiana farmers in the value of clean farming," comments Prof. Troop. "All weeds in the tomato field should be destroyed, preferably by plowing in the fall. This will dispose of the eggs for the succeeding crop. The infested stalks should, of course, be cut and burned as soon as discovered. This will aid materially in eliminating the insects, and Dame Nature comes to the rescue quite readily in the shape of parasites which will attack many of the caterpillars and destroy thousands of them in a season."

The potato stalk borer, which is closely related to the plum curculio, is found in several of our cultivated crops, but principally the potato. It is almost as devastating as the leaf-eating beetle which Indiana farmers have had to contend with. The adult, says the Purdue professor, is a small, ashen-gray beetle, less than one-fourth of an inch long. The egg is laid in a small hole at the base of the potato stalk; the beetle makes this hole with its long snout or proboscis. The egg hatches in a few days and the little, white grub gets its nourishment from the stalk. They continue boring in the stalks until August, and sometimes until September, and during these few months are able to cause an enormous loss of potato growers. They pupate in the stalks near the surface of the ground, remaining here until the following spring.

"The only way to eradicate the insect," contends Prof. Troop, "is to destroy their homes. The insect feeding entirely within the stem of the plant, like the tomato borer, cannot be harmed by spraying with poisonous substances, and all the farmer can do is to clean up all the dead potato tops after the crop is harvested and burn them. It is also desirable to clean up all the "horse nettles" or "bull nettles" which belong to the potato family of plants and destroy them in like manner.

Growers of late varieties of Indiana potatoes should be on the lookout for this insect, as it is especially damaging to such varieties, its life history showing that the insect does not have sufficient time to do any great damage before the earlier varieties mature."

Mrs. M. A. McLaughlin, 512 Jay St., LaCrosse, Wis., writes that she suffered all kinds of pains in her back and hips on account of kidney trouble and rheumatism. "I got some Foley Kidney Pills and after taking them for a few days there was a wonderful change in my case, for the pain entirely left my back and hips and I am thankful there is such a medicine as Foley Kidney Pills." Editorial Beshwacking.

A peculiarly stupid falsehood is that originated in the Indianapolis Star and reflected in the Starlets (Muncie and Terre-Haute Star) to the effect that Joseph B. Kealing was really for the nomination of Colonel Durbin, and double crossed his campaign, and double crossed his campaign for the nomination of Lawrence Shank, says the Muncie Press. It is Back Yard Croquet.

From many a back yard comes the shrill clatter of little tongues, as the kiddlets are whiling away vacation days with the fascinations of the croquet mallet.

Parents who seek peace at any price dread to see the festive wickets set up behind the back door. From past generations the tradition is handed down that nothing creates discord in Kidville like the purchase of a croquet set.

Really though, the turmoil of the young fry are to be viewed with some toleration. It is their first attempt at self government. The trouble is that without supervision, they are trying to play a game with such a complicated code of rules.

As these rules have filtered down from Big Sister and Big Brother, with modifications and local amendments producing a chaos, every disputed point has to be determined by seeing which party can clamor the louder.

If Mother will invest 10 cents for a book on croquet regulations, will proclaim the law to these turbulent elements, and will occasionally calm the fury of factions when Brother "shoves," the youngsters will not merely get some skill of hand and eye, but a touch of civil government, too.

The following from the Marion Chronicle accounts for the report that the State Republican platform did not declare for "county option," and George Lockwood ought to know as he was chairman of the resolutions committee:

The Chronicle reprinted the Republican State platform from the Indianapolis Star and thereby perpetuated two or three serious errors in verbiage. The phrase "local option" is used in the temperance plank when "county local option" was adopted by the committee, written in the platform, read before the convention and adopted by it. In the platform as prepared and adopted the saloon question is referred to as "a moral and economic question," while in the reprint only the phrase "moral question" is used. The Indianapolis News and Sun, in printing the platform, left out several words contained in the primary election plan, which declared not only for the primary election of delegates to district, State and national conventions, but for the primary nomination of all candidates for county and city office.

Governor Durbin gave this state one of the best administrations it has ever known, and so far as we know that is conceded by practically every one. He will devote every possible effort toward a chance to give it just such another and he deserves to win. If he does, he will give the State at least the equal of his former administration, and the Lord knows we need it.

At last we have come to a parting of the ways. The sheep and the goats are to be divided. A "provisional committee" of newspaper men, presumably arranged by Edwin M. Lee, Bull Moose State chairman and the man who originated the word "provisional," has issued a call for the first meeting of the "Indiana Progressive Press Association." The "provisional committee," guess who? George Stout, political writer on the Indianapolis Star and B. R. Iaman, editor of the Middletown News, and Edgar M. Baldwin, editor of the Fairmount News, late acquisition to the Bull Moose cause. Undoubtedly Messrs. Inman and Baldwin will attract a lot of newspaper men to the new organization. Now it will be possible for the Republican Editorial Association to tell who is true blue. W. Dud. Foulke and Relentless Redolph may as well begin packing their satchels now and prepare to go to the meeting.

It is sometimes stated that the larger state and interstate fairs have removed the need of county fairs and that they are stronger because there has not been so many of the small fairs: but this is a false impression. Live local interest is conducive to stronger general interest. The bulk of the people have not taken a live interest in the larger fairs and, certainly, there is no better advertisement for a community than to have it well represented—both by the people and exhibits at its county fair.

More than that, it would be hard to find a greater incentive for improvement along farm and home lines. It is hard to see fine specimens of stock, poultry, grain, fruit or domestic work exhibited by our neighbors and not want to try to do better—which must result, not only in individual, but also in general benefit. The good-natured rivalry engendered is entirely wholesome and beneficial from all points of view.

With a plank unequivocally declaring for the immediate re-enactment of the county local option law and pledging every Republican member of the legislature to its support, with a demand for a state constitutional convention through which the people may express their views with reference to changes in the state's organic law, with a demand for the extension of the corrupt practices act to cover local option and other local elections excepted by the present law every home and expectation of the progressive temperance. Republicans were satisfied by the Republican state convention in Indianapolis. The state platform contains other declarations which will commend themselves to the sentiment not only of Republicans, but of the people.

One of the causes of high prices is clear. Although there were six persons in the country in 1910 for every five in 1900, yet there were fewer sheep, fewer hogs and fewer cattle to feed them. Of course one way to meet this is to eat less meat but it is not likely that any of the parties either old or new will advocate this, although it might be better for all of us if we would make this change in debt, and, after all, it would be more practicable than many of the theories advocated by the politicians, who seek places for themselves rather than the well-being of the people.

Colonel Roosevelt intended to have the new party entirely free from bossism. All the colonel did do at Chicago was to write the platform, name the candidate and sound the keynote. All he is doing in the several states is telling his followers just what to do in respect to their attitude concerning local and state tickets. Otherwise the voice of the people is doing the business, the voice of the people, according to an ancient aphorism, being just the same as the voice of the colonel.

The Indianapolis Star agrees with that seasoned political purifier, Fred Landis of Logansport, that for 10 these many years both of the old parties have been led by political crooks—that word "crook" is a generic term describing any politician who does not take his orders from the purifiers. The new party, therefore, has had a new birth, and starts off fresh and clean with such leaders as Bill Flynn, Hod Stilwell, A. J. Beveridge and Ed M. Lee.

Governor Marshall is already known all over the country as the man who tried to amend the constitution of Indiana all by himself; and who was overruled by a democratic circuit court judge, and again, on appeal, by a democratic chief justice of the supreme court of Indiana.

They are calling it the tomtom ticket down east, Tom Wilson and Tom Marshall. It's not difficult to beat a tomtom.

"I would never dream of reporting an interview with him unless I had it in black and white over his own signature." So wrote a newspaper man from Washington several years ago. If any self-styled progressive wants to know to whom this refers he can find out with a little investigation.

Many people tear around the streets on hot days as if they thought they could outrun the sun's rays, which are angling down at the rate of 186,000 miles a second.

If the assessors wish to find taxable property, they will be much more likely to locate it with the man down in the back streets who collects garbage, than with those that rent houses in the fashionable suburb.

If Harry Thaw realized what you have to pay today for good board, his residence at Matteawan might look better to him.

Not even the base ball news is read with the attention given to the description of special bargains in a newspaper's advertising columns.

Meat may be higher than ever before, but the public won't rise until gasoline goes up again.

It is a very easy matter for a man to mistake his own whims for the "demands of the people."

Another commandment—Thou shalt have no other bosses before thee.

at once on his keynote speech.

"I thank you for this honor," he said, "and the time has never been and never will come to pass when it will be anything other than an honor and never will be so long as this Republican party lives to preside over the Sixth district convention.

"We rely solely on our record for success. If we have kept the faith we are entitled to be kept in power. Those who oppose within and without would have us believe that we are no longer entitled to govern this people because our party has ceased to be progressive. History refutes this slander. The great prosperity that has come to this nation is directly traceable to the policies advocated and carried out by the Republican party."

Mayor Barnard reiterated the party's belief in a sound money policy, a protective tariff, the safeguarding of the courts and the wise regulation of the trusts. In regard to the last issue he declared the Republican party did not believe trusts should be destroyed. He pointed to the record of the Taft administration in this regard, how it had vigorously prosecuted the trusts and had made the great corporations to feel the lash of justice. Particularly, he said, had one trust of which we hear so much in this campaign, the Harvester trust, been compelled to abide by the law.

Mayor Barnard asserted the party reaffirmed its faith in the protective tariff, the potent force in the development of the country. We declare our opposition to free trade, he said, because we have tried it. He said the party favored a tariff commission so as to get at the facts and be enabled to make a wise tariff legislation, and that the Democratic party had strangled every effort wherein it had been possible.

The temporary chairman read a review of the achievements of the Taft administration. He read it, he said, because he did not care to make a break if the Indianapolis Star should care to publish it. He was loudly applauded at this point.

"Notwithstanding all this," Mayor Barnard continued, "this campaign has developed into a three cornered fight. One of the parties is to be led by Theodore Roosevelt, the man who has been the beneficiary of more emoluments from the Republican party than has any other man in the history of the United States."

Before discussing the Bull Moose party, the temporary chairman said he had no slander in his heart nor in his tongue. He said the Republican party did not fight its battles that way.

Mayor Barnard declared vehemently that the Republican party had never followed a man, but that Theodore Roosevelt was leading the new party to gain personal ambition and power. He asserted "this man on horseback is an exact counterpart of Napoleon who sacrificed thousands of lives, his friends and at last his country, to contribute to his own glory."

The temporary chairman said he had been unable to find that the Bull Moose party had an issue other than it was against the things that are.

"What's the matter?" asked Mayor Barnard.

"Sore," answered a man in the audience.

"Temporarily insane," shouted another.

The Newcastle mayor said the only cry that had been raised was that the Republican party was boss ridden. He said there was one party in the campaign that was boss ridden, and that party is the Bull Moose party.

The convention developed into an experience meeting at this juncture. The chairman said they would have to be fed some more free soup before they came back to their senses, and there was answered back cries of "three cent hogs," "forty cent wheat," "twenty-five cent corn" and "forty dollar horses."

cries because the country was more crisis because the country was more prosperous than it had ever been; that labor was employed, and contented and that farmers were getting good prices for their products. He said the crisis was a political one which had arisen in the minds of the Bull Moosers because they want power.

"What do they offer?" asked the chairman.

"Roosevelt," came back from the crowd.

"No, they don't," answered Barnard.

"He offers that."

"Lily white Perkins," suggested another in the crowd.

In conclusion the temporary chairman said the Republican party proposed to safeguard against attacks on the constitution and the courts by the party that is led by the man who said it would be a calamity to elect him president again, and we agree with him.

The convention was opened with a prayer by the Rev. W. H. Clark of Connersville, formerly pastor of the United Presbyterian church of this city.

Richard Elliott was elected temporary secretary and read the convention call. The county delegates were instructed to meet and organize and adjournment was taken until after dinner.

INJURED WORKER IS RECOVERING

Clifton Weston of New Salem Who Suffered Dislocation of Vertebra Will Get Well.

ACCIDENT WAS AT ORANGE

Clifton Weston, who fell at the new school building, in Orange a week ago and suffered a dislocation of some of the upper vertebrae, is steadily improving, and his physicians fully expect his recovery, says the Connersville News. The spinal cord seems to have been injured slightly if at all, and the natural repair of the torn ligaments and the recovery from the profound shock seem to be the chief work in store for his constitution. The injured man is still at the home of John Ryan, where he was taken soon after his accident, and he may not be able to go to his own home for a week or more. His wife is at his bedside.

It will be remembered that Mr. Weston's fall occurred because of the breaking of a scaffold. His home is in New Salem, Rush county.

MANY FARMERS PUT THEIR OATS IN BARN

Wet Weather Retards Threshing And Keeps Grain From Being Brought to Market.

CORN ABOUT ALL MARKETING

There is very little grain of any description coming into the local market at present. The rainy weather of the past few days has retarded the threshing of both wheat and oats and there is practically none of it being marketed. There is very little wheat in the county.

When oats threshing is begun again after the weather clears up and the oats in stock dry out sufficiently to be threshed, there will be an increased movement of the grain, but the elevator men say that many farmers are storing their oats for higher prices. The price paid for the grain today is 26 cents per bushel, a falling off of two cents within the past two weeks.

Warehouse men never store anything but wheat for customers, and consequently whatever oats are stored by the farmers are put away in their own individual bins on the farm. Nearly all the corn in the county that is to be marketed has already been brought in and there is scarcely any of this kind of grain to be had anywhere.

Out of a total adult white male population of 138,000 in the Transval, nearly fifty thousand are unmarried men.

"You certainly wouldn't," I remarked, thinking of the frumpy professors who—"But then they sometimes do, Jo—the professors kiss, I mean. I've seen it in the papers." She had to agree with me, too. "I'd back you in any capacity," I told her admiringly, "and the novelty of a female demonstrator might get you the job."

"A female chauffeur!" she laughed. "How does it sound?"

And from the way she looked at me I knew she never had considered the idea for a single minute. I'm sure I went red, for I'd been in earnest, and "I shall do something!" I burst out. The whole idea seemed so novel and possible. She leaned forward finally and clasped her hands. I knew from the attitude that she was resigned—for something.

"The trouble is," she mused, "it's the wrong time of year to begin to teach. Another month and all the schools will be over."

"Good!" I said heartily. "So that's out."

I just wouldn't think of Jo as a teacher! She'd grow old and gray, and have to put spectacles over the gorgeous eyes, and fall into the habit of talking theorems and such stuff. I hate theorems!

"But then I may need time for preparation," she went on, not hearing me, I guess—at least not paying the slightest attention if she did. "You see I don't know a thing about it, and then, too, I'll have to get the position."

"Well, where do I come in in this scheme of things?" I asked. "What am I to be doing all this time?"

Jo drew in her breath sharply as if something hurt, then put out her hands as if I had tried to strike her. "I shall do something!" I burst out.

"Surely, Jo, you don't think I'm a little nippy and can't?"

"You're too young," she began.

"Young! Bosh!" I wouldn't let her go on with that. "Why, I'm nineteen!" I said it as if I'd been a thousand. "My mother was married when she was nineteen. Why, Jo, when she was as old as you, you were three years old."

I was getting rather mixed, I was so anxious to impress her.

"Poor old me," Jo sighed, then she laughed so heartily I knew I grew red again. "And I've been thinking all this time that I was just getting a look-in on life. Why, I'm an old maid! And here I've never even had 30,000 VOICES!

And Many Are The Voices of Rushville People.

Thirty thousand voices—What a grand chorus! And that's the number of American men and women who are publicly praising Doan's Kidney Pills for relief from backache, kidney and bladder ills. They say it to friends. They tell it in the home papers. Rushville people are in this chorus. Here's a Rushville case.

S. Bebout, 404 W. First St., Rushville, Ind., says: Doan's Kidney Pills are just as represented and I am glad to recommend them. I had pains through my back and kidneys and the action of my kidneys was irregular. When I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills I did so and they soon brought relief."

Mr. Bebout is only one of many Rushville people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Bebout had the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c. all stores. a thought of getting married."

And, sure enough, she never had. She never had had as close as a fourth cousin connection with a romance. I looked at her suddenly and wondered how in the world she had managed to escape; how she had kept some one from running off with her bodily.

"I suppose I've wasted my time," Jo went on. "I know I have thrown away chances. I might have married long ago and settled the future for both of us."

"You might have," I agreed, "but introspection, dear, won't take the place of our three thousand a year." Which argument must have made Practical Something or other sit up and take notice. "Now just don't you speak to me for ten minutes, and I'll tell you at the end of that time what I am going to do."

I put out my hand toward the newspapers just to brush up on the things there are to be done in this world. After consideration I selected a held-over Transcript as I wanted the very best advice going. The first thing that met my eye was: "The dancer who is supposed to have caused the downfall." I turned over hastily. After all I was looking for the want column. Two minutes had not passed before I landed on the very thing: Wanted—Companion. Wealthy woman recovering from nervous prostration, wants young, good-looking, well-bred, well-educated, well-read, tactful girl for companion. Must speak French, bridge, foot-ball, baseball, automobile and golf. Prefer a musician who sings. Name your own salary.

"Well, I'm it!" I exclaimed with conviction, and passed the paper on to Jo. "You would think that woman had known my qualifications when she put that in the paper."

Jo read it, and I do believe she would have whistled if she had known how. From her expression I thought she thought it was the very thing.

"How much salary shall I name?" I asked excitedly.

"She doesn't want much!" Jo said with hauteur—just that, truly—not hearing my question, anyhow not answering it. "Well, I should say she would let any one name the salary. Where does she expect to get—?"

I was jabbing my chest with my two forefingers and distorting my face to make Jo see I was it, because she didn't seem to listen to what I said.

"My goodness!" she exclaimed. "Do you qualify for all that?" She looked at the paper helplessly—the only time I ever saw Jo helpless about anything.

"You've always told me that good looks are a matter of opinion," I replied, "so barring looks and skimming in on golf—I know my A-B-Cs of golf; I drive fairly, but I'm too wiggly to putt—why I think I might venture to say I do qualify for the rest. You see she doesn't say I've got to do all those things; I've just got to speak 'em."

"Don't bite off your words, Loulie," she said in that calm, cool way of hers that's lots more effective than a slap. "Breathe is cheap."

"I'll remember, dear," I promised. I'd have promised her anything right at that minute.

"You're not tactful," she contradicted flatly, although she always tells me never to contradict anything flatly.

"I could be if I tried," I returned.

"I know the rules."

"I wonder if she would consider you a musician, and if she would think you could sing? You've slapped at everything generally, but—"

"I'm sure I could squeeze in," I told her. "She only prefers a musician who can sing."

Now Jo knows my throat is a regular Trilby throat. The bridge of my nose is good and my diaphragm—from tennis and swimming—is almost as good as Tetraxin's.

"Nervous prostration!" she mused finally, gazing at the lines she didn't see. "A vampire who'll take the best of you and will leave you high and dry in the same condition as herself."

I guess not."

"Why I have the constitution of an ox," I argued. "I haven't a nerve in my body. I—"

"Not now," she interrupted.

"Please, may I try? May I at least answer it?" I pleaded.

"It won't do any harm to answer it," she agreed, and I pounced upon her so suddenly with a kiss that it landed on her nose, "but—!" She held up a forefinger. Oh! "Why not write an advertisement yourself, dictate your own terms, and let somebody come to you?"

"Oh, I say, Jo, but that's two birds in the bush." I was thinking of the salary part.

"No harm trying," she smiled, "and I would call it another iron in the fire. You haven't the bird in the hand yet, and anyhow it may not be at all the kind of bird that I am going to like."

You will notice that she said "I" instead of "you." I suppose she knew the salary part made me blind as to which kind of a bird it was.

"True," I said, trying to look as wise as she did.

I went to the desk to write one advertisement and answer the other. Of course I answered first, I chewed the end of the pen-staff reflectively, which I know is awfully bad form. Then I looked at Jo.

"Do you think?" I asked, "I dare name three thousand a year?"

CHAPTER III.

Secretary of Frivolous Affairs.

I know there's an all-wise Providence who directs the universe so much better than we could do it, although sometimes it seems that Providence gets twisted; because the things we aim at we don't get, and the things we don't aim at we do get.

I came back from my interview with the wealthy woman who was recovering from nervous prostration and just sat down and cried. She lived in a gilded prison on Commonwealth avenue with all the windows tight-shut for fear of drafts in the uncertain spring weather. No wonder she had nervous prostration. Anybody's nerves would shirk for air in that place. In exchange for what she demanded and knowing I had named three thousand a year, she offered me eight hundred with the reservation of letting me go on two weeks' notice. I began practicing tact on the spot and left the matter pending; then I went out into God's sunshine, took some deep-sea breaths of the uncertain spring weather, and when I got back home, poured out the whole mean thing on Jo's motherly bosom. Then—well I've said it—I sat down and cried. I always do cry when I'm angry.

I had hardly dried my eyes and was trying to get rid of the horrid tear-streaks down my face—I'm a fright when I cry—when the bell jangled and the postman came in with a "special." I looked at the letter and for one wild instant I thought perhaps the mine had been pumped dry. Then I noticed that it was directed to the initials we had signed to the advertisement. The "special" was written from the Somerset, and I stood there gazing idiotically at the envelope, turning it over and over trying to guess who it might be from—like every woman does, except Jo—when Jo came in and I ripped it open. I looked at the name first, of course, and my knees gave way. I passed the letter on to Jo.

"Maria Crowninshield Hazard!" she exclaimed. She, too, had read the name first—Jo is faineline after all.

"Mrs. Frederick Hazard!"

"Do you think it's actually true she wants a companion?" I asked.

"Why not?" demanded Jo, and she read the letter, which of course was the only way to find out.

"I didn't know she lived at the Somerset," I remarked, my mind grasping only tangible things.

"She's doing over her house. Her daughter came out this winter. Surely, you've seen about the reception next week, presumably to announce an engagement?"

"I do hope she doesn't want me for a sort of sublimated lady's maid," I cried.

WHY BE MISERABLE WITH HAY FEVER

A Simple, Safe Remedy Gives Instant Relief, Even in The Worst Cases.

Thousands of people are miserable two or three months every summer with Hay Fever and Rose Cold. They go around sneezing, blowing the nose and wiping their eyes, and at night they are so choked up they can hardly breathe. There is no need of this. Ely's Cream Balm will relieve all these distressing symptoms in less than five minutes' time.

Hay Fever is due to an over sensitive condition of the membrane lining of the nose and throat. Ely's Cream Balm soothes, heals and strengthens this delicate inside skin, so that you not only get instant relief but are also protected against a return of the trouble.

Don't hesitate because you have been disappointed with other remedies. Get a fifty-cent bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist, and if you are not satisfied after a fair trial, get your money back. All druggists sell and recommend it.

"You certainly would be an accomplished lady's maid," Jo replied sarcastically, and she was seldom sarcastic.

"True," I laughed but Jo didn't.

The note was short and to the point, but it had a cordial undertone that I knew Jo liked. Mrs. Hazard wanted me to telephone to her as soon as the note reached me and arrange an interview as quickly as possible. She couldn't explain in a letter just what she wanted, as her proposition was to be rather intricate and unusual, but she thought from the tone of the advertisement that I'd do. I had borrowed that about speaking French, bridge, foot-ball, et cetera. I pondered over the "intricate and unusual," but in all the wild flights of my imagination I couldn't land on anything that seemed to be just that, unless she wanted me to do all these things. Gracious! I'd have to draw the line at foot-ball and base-ball; I could root, but—

Now I've always denied that I had nerves. I take it back. I'm sure I wore a groove in the floor up and down the hallway that afternoon before she came. I couldn't sit down long enough to eat my luncheon, but caught it in relays at the dining-room door each time I passed. Finally we heard the hum of a big car—you can always tell from the sound when a car is big—which stopped, snorted and stood still in front of our place. Then came the jangle of the bell in just the space of time that it would take a dignified old lady to get from the car to the button.

I had searched stray newspapers and magazines for a possible picture of her, as much to kill time as to satisfy an impatient curiosity, but the only one I could find was a snapshot in a Sunday newspaper, taken at a charity bazaar, showing her with one foot in the air and her mouth open. I crumpled the paper and flung it into a corner much to Jo's disgust, for she prides herself on the neat way I've been brought up, but I kept thinking of it as I heard the elevator going down and then coming up again. I giggled hysterically, and my mouth was still stretched in a broad grin when Mrs. Maria Crowninshield Hazard entered. It's another instance of an all-wise Providence taking care of us when we can't take care of ourselves, for she liked the smile—I knew it from the way she smiled back and squeezed my hand—and from the minute I looked into her beaming, fat face—it is fat and I'll have to say so—I knew if she wanted me for lady's maid I'd try to qualify for the job.

She examined first myself, then Jo through her lorgnette, but I wasn't one whit frightened; she looked so motherly.

"But which one is Miss Codman?" she asked.

"I am Miss Codman—Josephine Codman," Jo answered her, "but my sister, Loulie, is the one you came to see."

She Got Up and Made an Excursion Around the Room!

She looked me over again and a thought struck me.

"If you want Jo," I said hastily, "it's just the same. It's all in the family." But I could see Jo a lady's maid. Goodness!

"I want the one who speaks French, bridge, foot-ball, base-ball, automobile and golf," she smiled. "It's an experiment."

She sat down and waved the lorgnette at the open window.

"I see you like fresh air—that's good, splendid!" She raised the lorgnette and took in the room, the walls, the pictures, the furniture—that furniture is all right. "Good taste," she murmured; then she looked at us. "You don't mind my being personal? I have a delicate proposition to make and I must be sure of myself and you before I make it."

IN BORROWED SET OF TEETH

Prospector Wanted to Appear Well in Photograph, and Effected Loan of Essentials.

Thomas Jefferson Stone was a typical claim holder and prospector. He came from Indiana. He had no teeth, his hair was gray, his features sallow and withered, and he looked sixty-three or sixty-four. He told me, however, he was only forty-six. There was a cowed, placid, helpless air about him, and yet in his eyes there was a fire—a faint and glimmering, the fire of a fading fanaticism. He was still the victim of obsession. He had been 25 years prospecting, picking out claims, hoping to strike it rich some day.

I asked him how he lost his teeth. He said by taking medicine good for neuralgia, but too strong for his ivory-ries. I asked him why he didn't have had a false set made. He said he had had a set, but he took them out and put them in his pocket one day, where his handkerchief was, "to rest his mouth," and happening to take out the handkerchief quickly, he pulled out the set of teeth also and the plate fell on the floor and broke.

I told Thomas Jefferson Stone that I wanted his photograph, and three days afterward he was ready for the kodak. When he came I saw he had a set of teeth in his mouth. I was astonished. We were scores of miles from any dentist, or any town where a dentist could be.

"Hello, Stone," I said; "you've got a set of teeth. How's that?"

"He gave a smile of conquest. "I borrowed 'em to be photographed!" he said.—Gilbert Parker in the Metropolitan Magazine.

CRITIC NEVER TOO POPULAR

Bitter Indictment, Which Seems the Limit, Evidently Penned by One Who Has Suffered.

Critics were created for the sole purpose of telling the public that it has no taste and that its ideas are always narrow and perverted. Also, that it does not know, under any circumstances, what it is talking about. A critic makes it his business not to agree with anybody. In his efforts to do this he very often disagrees with himself.

Many a painter, author, dramatist, or composer has been shown by the critics that what he thought he meant he did not mean at all.

A critic is usually a creature of such profound learning that he can, when rhapsodizing over something that is absolutely worthless to everybody else, use a number of new adjectives the meaning of which is as obscure and hazy as the object to which they are applied.

When critics die, it is the generally accepted idea of all people who do not agree with them that they are punished by being placed in the presence of the thing or things they have so persistently lauded and are forced to listen to it or gaze unwinkingly and silently upon it throughout eternity, while evil spirits taunt them with their bad taste.—Judge's Library.

Drummer Was Lost.

A Scotch story is that of a diminutive drummer in a local brass band, who was in the habit when out parading with his comrades of walking by sound and not by sight, owing to his drum being so high that he was unable to see over it. The band, on Saturday afternoons, paraded usually in one direction, but the other day the leader thought he would change the route a little, and turned down a by-street. The drummer, unaware of this movement, kept on his accustomed way, drumming as hard as ever he could. By and by, after finishing his part, and not hearing the others, he stopped, and, pushing his drum to one side, he looked to see what was the matter. His astonishment may be imagined at finding that he was alone. "Hae!" he cried to some bystanders, "has any o' ye seen a band hereabouts?"

ESCAPE FROM LIVING TOMB IN POLAR WILDS

More Thrilling Than Fiction, This Tale of the North.

Copenhagen, Aug. 13.—Einar Mikkelsen, the Danish explorer, who was supposed to be dead in Greenland, was recently rescued by a Norwegian fishing schooner and brought to Aaleund, Norway. Mikkelsen started on his expedition in March, 1910, accompanied by Iversen. The main object of the expedition was to retrieve the diaries and observations of Erichsen, who, with companions, perished in 1908. They succeeded in recovering the records in May, 1910, but have just succeeded in getting back to civilization after encountering untold hardships. They were obliged to kill their dogs for food. At the time of their rescue they looked like wild animals and the sailors were about to shoot them in mistake for musk oxen.

PLOT TO SEIZE RUSSIA'S RULER

Sailors Were Going to Force Czar's Abdication.

THEN ATTACK ST. PETERSBURG

Daring Conspiracy Which Had Its Inception on a Battleship and Which Was to Include a General Mutiny of the Baltic Squadron, Contemplated Utter Overthrow of Romanoffs and Setting Up of New Government.

Odessa, Aug. 13.—There has just been disclosed at Sebastopol a revolutionary plot on the battleship Ivan Zlatoust for which ten men were sentenced to death.

The revolutionists had the daring object of seizing the imperial yacht Standart while the czar and his family were on board voyaging from Malta to Sebastopol. The czar was to have been compelled to abdicate his throne or abrogate his powers and proclaim a limited monarchy.

The seizure of the imperial yacht was to have been the signal for a general mutiny of the crews of the Baltic squadron, who were to arrest or murder all the officers and attack Cronstadt and St. Petersburg simultaneously.

Right censorship over the press has prevented any local reference to this incident or the recent symptoms of grave dissatisfaction among the rank and file of the army and navy and the officers of all grades have been compelled to sign an agreement not to discuss any phase of the discontent.

NOT SERIOUS

Another Liner Strikes an Iceberg, but is Able to Proceed.

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 13.—A marconi-gram from the straits of Belle Isle states that the Allan line steamer Corsican, bound from Montreal for Liverpool, struck an iceberg in latitude 52° 24 north, longitude 52° 15 west. The Lake Champlain, also bound from Montreal for Liverpool, was going to her assistance. The Corsican has between 400 and 500 passengers.

The vessel's bow was considerably crushed by coming in contact with the iceberg. After a thorough examination temporary repairs were made and the vessel proceeded on her way to Liverpool without assistance. None of the passengers or crew was injured.

Shipping Circles Apprehensive.

New York, Aug. 13.—The reassuring wireless report from the Corsican that she was not seriously hurt, and that despite her injury she was going ahead under her own steam, did not allay alarm among shipping men in New York. They remembered that first reports from the Titanic were of precisely the same nature, that the ship was safe and making her way to port with other ships standing by ready to help in case help was needed.

DRIVEN BACK

Nicaraguan Rebels Repelled by Government Forces.

Managua, Nicaragua, Aug. 13.—Under the commands of General Luis Mena, the secretary of war, recently deposed by President Diaz, and General Zeledon, one time war secretary in the cabinet of former President Zelaya, the combined rebel forces began a bombardment of the Nicaraguan capital. For several hours the attacking guns were out of range and the shells fell short of the city. Later, however, the rebel pieces were advanced and shrapnel shells burst frequently over the city proper. Several women and children were wounded by bullets from the exploding missiles. When the bombardment became general the government troops replied to the attack with their guns on Loma Hill, the fortress defending the city.

The rebels presently made a fierce onslaught on the penitentiary, but after a sharp engagement they were driven back. Three hours later the attacking force moved around to the eastern side of the capital and directed their fire on the government troops defending that portion of the city. They were again repelled.

WATER QUESTION AROUSES PEOPLE

Many Samples From Cities All Over The State Are Received by Chemist Barnard.

LARGE INCREASE IS NOTED

Should Not Be Single Driven or Open Well Unless Below Impermeable Strata.

The water laboratory, in the charge of R. H. Barnard, State Chemist, has recently completed 6,057 samples of water sent in from various parts of the state for analysis. These samples cover a period of about seven years. The last year has seen an unusually large number of samples received, due, Mr. Barnard believes, to interest aroused among the people of the state in pure water, and to more watchfulness on the part of local health officers, who have learned to use the laboratory when they have any reason to suspect a source of domestic water supply as a source of contagious disease.

"The water samples examined disclose an astonishingly large percentage of polluted wells," says Mr. Barnard. "Of all the samples examined during the last year, 60 per cent were found seriously polluted, and 50 per cent were wholly unfit for use. Most of these samples came from shallow wells. The dug well is rapidly going out of use, but the shallow driven well we still have with us, driven even though shallow it is safe from pollution.

"In almost every instance, the shallow well in the small town, village, or on the farm, taps a basin which drains back yards, farm yards, and other areas where much organic matter rots, and the rains carry out the juices and bacteria into the ground, to be pumped through the shallow wells in water used in the homes.

"In cities like Indianapolis and those smaller, there ought not to be permitted a single driven or open well, unless driven below impermeable strata. The shallow city well taps a basin that catches juices from city wastes, and is certain to spread disease. These wells, the analysis here shows, are a constant menace to health. They never improve but always grow worse.

"The well condition this year seem, from our reports, to be unusually bad. Whether this is due to more watchfulness on the part of health officers who are sending in more samples of suspected water I do not know. We usually find well pollution more extensive in extending drouths, but this year the percentage has increased in spite of the continued heavy rainfall.

"Another source of numerous samples is the enlightened property owner. He moves from one home to another, and before using water from the new well, has a sample examined. Persons who have abandoned wells which they wish to resume using have learned to have samples of the water examined before they begin using it."

MT. JACKSON ONE OF BEST IN STATE

Athletics, Who Will Play Here Sunday Have Great Record For This Year.

ANDERSON BACK IN GAME

The Mt. Jackson Athletics, the team which will play here Sunday, has the reputation of being one of the best in the state and the locals will stack up against the strongest opposition of the season. The Athletics won Sunday from Fortville 7 to 6. They lost one game this year to the A. B. C.'s in eleven innings. Al Whitridge, considered one of the best pitchers in the state does the twirling for the Mt. Jackson team and has been going at a fast clip all season. Rushville is said to be at his best this year and the game should prove the best of the season.

Local fans will be glad to hear that Manager Maibaugh has succeeded in bringing "Bob Anderson back into line. Anderson is a wonder behind the bat and proved a favorite here in the two games he caught. He has been ill for the last two weeks but will be here Sunday. With Avery in form and Anderson behind the bat Rushville will put up a fast article of ball. The line-up will be the same as last Sunday with the exception of Anderson. "Johnnie" Finn will again be at third base.

KILLS FIVE FOOT SNAKE.

Mrs. Lizzie Hurst, of St. Paul, is the heroine of a tragic experience which has been the talk of the town. Mrs. Hurst's heroism consists in killing one of the largest snakes seen in that locality for years. It measured over five feet. The reptile was discovered in Jesse Barlow's garden, which is near the Hurst home. Mrs. Hurst didn't run, nor did she scream. On the contrary, she seized a club and gave battle to the snake, killing it with a few blows. A man of average height held the snake up in one hand and it reached from the ground to a point even with his chin.

HAS PURSE SNATCHERS.

Mrs. William Walker was standing under an awning in front of the Buxton shoe store in St. Paul to keep out of the rain when her purse was snatched from her hand. The thief disappeared before Mrs. Walker had hardly discovered her loss. The purse was a small hand purse and contained about two dollars.

NEGROES ROB DRUNKEN MAN

Harry Cunningham of Knightstown Gets Soused and His Watch and Wallet is Lifted.

HE'S FINED FOR DRUNK, TOO

Arthur Lowery, One of Accused, is Allowed to Escape by Newcastle Police.

Harry Cunningham, a Knightstown carpenter, while sleeping off a drunk Sunday afternoon on North Sixteenth street, was robbed of his watch and $13 in money by two negroes, says the Newcastle Courier. The robbery was seen by Clyde Kessler and his wife, who live near the scene, and as a result Arthur Lowery and Charles Owens, both colored, were arrested by the police.

The two alleged robbers were picked up by the police late Sunday evening. They were being held at the police station and while Sergeant Henry Ives was off his guard Lowery walked from the station and escaped. He was seen to leave the room by Ives and announced that he was going to the toilet room. Instead he went out the front door without his coat or hat and has not been seen since.

Lowery's disappearance was soon discovered and patrolmen were detailed to look for him. The officers went to his boarding house on West Vine street, but arrived five minutes too late. The fugitive had been there a few minutes before and had secured his personal effects and disappeared.

Owens made no attempt to escape and is being held in the county jail. An affidavit charging highway robbery was filed against him in the circuit court by the prosecuting attorney. He is being held in default of the required $500 bail.

Cunningham was also arrested on an intoxication charge. He pleaded guilty before Mayor Barnard and was fined $2 and costs. As the negroes robbed him of all his money he could not pay the fine and costs and went to jail. An effort is being made to secure the required amount from Knightstown. His watch and money were not recovered.

ADVISES WIT BE MADE PRESS AGENT

Greensburg Newspaper Says Vandal Who Painted "G" Out of Glove Company Sign

SHOULD NOT BE PROSECUTED

When the fiend who painted out the letter "G" on a sign in Rushville and made it read "Rushville Love Factory" instead of "Rushville Glove Factory," he didn't know he was performing a real service for the company, says a Greensburg newspaper.

Until the vandal used his brush few persons in the country round about knew there was such a thing as a Rushville glove company. But now every paper in every hamlet in this section of the State and elsewhere has called attention to this company and the value of the advertising thus accruing to the company, at the regular newspaper rates, would aggregate a sum sufficient to paint a new sign, cover the entire factory building with a new coat of paint and build an addition that will be necessary to take care of the increased demand for the company's product.

If the reward the company has offered for this genius result in his capture, the company ought to make a press agent out of him.

party to be its county chairman. It is true that at this time we had two factions within the party—the standard Republicans and progressive Republicans, each standing for principles which each believed to be right and each ready to make a fight for the embodiment of said principles in the party platform for the coming campaign. Under these conditions we held a primary for the nomination of candidates for the various county offices and for the legislature—a primary, the expenses of which met by contributions from the candidates themselves. With all as progressive or stand-patters, as Taft men or Roosevelt men, participating in this primary, the result of which was the nomination of as good a ticket as was ever placed before the voters of the county for their consideration.

Regardless of the personal views of any of these candidates on national issues they deserve the support of every man who considered himself a member of the Republican party at the time of their nomination; and they should not be embarrassed by the great rupture that has taken place in the Republican party or lose any votes on account of circumstances and conditions which they could not avoid.

B. R. Inman, editor of the Middletown News, whose flop from the Republican party was given so much publicity by the Indianapolis Star, counsels against a third county ticket as follows:

Republicans of all factions helped to nominate the several candidates on the county and legislative ticket at the recent county convention. Among the candidates are men of well known progressive principles. Others belong to the reactionary element; while still others appear to have no particular preference in their attitude on national questions.

It is true that conditions have changed since the meeting of the county convention and that the factional differences in the party seem to be such as to render any compromise possible. This, however, should not alter the situation so far as the county and legislative ticket is concerned. The forces that united in naming those candidates should unite in electing them. When a man goes into a convention and votes and otherwise uses his influence in selecting a candidate, and such candidate becomes the choice of the convention by fair and honest methods, he is honor bound to support that candidate at the polls. Many Republicans of course, will justify themselves in refusing to abide by the results of the Chicago convention on the ground that the action of the convention did not express the sentiment of the great majority of the Republican voters throughout the country. This position, however, should not affect their attitude toward the county and local ticket.

INVESTIGATION ENDS.

A Washington dispatch says: Secretary of Interior Walter L. Fisher finds nothing in the transaction which Former Representative James E. Watson has had with the general land office to warrant criticism. The investigation which Secretary Fisher ordered, after recent charges by the Philadelphia North American and Chicago Tribune, has ended and it was stated at Secretary Fisher's office yesterday that the affair is "a closed incident," as far as that office is concerned. The investigation showed no irregularities, it was stated.
